

What's The Difference Between Software Engineering And Software Development?

Engineers apply the scientific method to solve problems, developers develop things. Both positions are involved in the creation of things - the scope of involvement changes.

Software Engineers

A software engineer is applying engineering principles to the creation of software.

Software Developers

Software developers focus on developing specific functionality.

